HIS HONOR EXPLAINS.

Judge White Sets Forth in Detail Why He Did as He Did-Undiscriminating Brewers, Bettling Wholesplers and Bucket and Bottle Rerollers Given Reasons.

Together with the license decisions, Judge White hands down a memorandum, opinion, explanation or charge to the applicants and the public, setting forth just why the Court decided as it did in certain clearly defined cases. This memorandum, or charge, as the readers from diverse standpoints may regard it, is certainly full of interest. Whether he be a dealer, an applicant knocked out, or only an observer, each citizen will read it all, as showing just "why this is thus." Judge White's full memorandum is, therefore, appended:

Unexpectedly and much against my will I was thrown into the License Court this year and had to hold it alone. I felt the great responsibility, and knew how the Court might be criticised and misrepresented. But a judge who shrinks from any duty, or is deterred from a faithful performance of it from fear of personal consequences, is unworthy of his of-

At the beginning of the court and during its sittings the Department of Public Safety of the city of Pittsburg presented certain papers in open court complaining of numerous viola-tions of the law by brewers, wholesale and retail dealers, and calling upon the Court to aid the department in suppressing these evils and securing good municipal government. These papers and the duty of the Court under the law required a searching and thorough examina-tion of the applicants. Nor could they complain of this. The law requires certain qualiations in the applicants, and if they have had license that they shall have observed all the laws on the subject. By their applications they assert in court that they possess these qualifications, and have faithfully kept these laws. It is the right and duty of the Court to give them a thorough cross-examination.

A CLEAR DISTINCTION. The law requires that all applicants for retail license shall be citizens, and men of "temperate habits and good moral character;" also that the Court shall refuse the license when it is not necessary for the accommodation of the public and the entertainment of strangers and trav-elers." This is the imperative mandate of the elera." This is the imperative manual statute. The evils of intemperance and excessive drinking had become so great and widespread that the public welfare required more arrangent regulations on the subject. The acts stringent regulations on the subject. The acts of 1887 were passed to check these evils. The act in reference to distillers, brewers, wholesale dealers and bottlers was before the wholesale dealers and bottlers was before the Legislature at the same time as the retail act, and should be construed in connection with it—both as parts of the new system—for in all these cases the Court is required to hear remonstrances and objections, and exercise; a sound discretion. If these acts are too stringent the remedy is with the Legislature. The Court should administer them in their true intent and spirit. The Court has no right to construct these acts in accordance with any personal views on the subject, or stretch them to meet any supposed public demand.

As many applicants were refused, and some who had license last year, it is proper to state the grounds of the Court's action; not the reasons in each particular case, but classifying them under several general heads. Some were refused on one ground and some on several. RETAIL DEALERS. The grounds of refusal in these cases may be arranged under four heads.

First—Unfitness of the applicants. Many of them were not up to the requirement of the law-"men of temperate habits and good moral character."
Second-Not necessary for the accommodation of the public. Many of them had no ac-commodations whatever for the public or the entertainment of strangers or travelers. They had, or proposed to have, a saloon for the sale of drinks. Some pretended to have a restaurof drinks. Some pretended to have a restaurant, giving a sandwich, lunch or occasional meal. That does not come up to the requirement of the law. Some thought their houses were necessary to accommodate the laboring men and others in the neighborhood with drinks. That is not within the letter or meaning of the statute. The house must be necessary for the accommodation of the public apart from drinks.

Third-Fiolations of the laws relating to the Third—Violations of the lauss relating to the sale of liquors, especially selling or furnishing drinks on the Sabbath or election days; selling to minors or men of intemperate habits; trusting for drinks and taking it out of the wages of laboring men on pay-days; having billiards and pool tables, cards, etc., where games are played for drinks, etc., etc.

Fourth Keenise house that pool tables, cards, etc., where games are played for drinks, etc., etc.

Fourth-Keeping houses that were nuisances in the neighborhood. As for example—permitting noisy crowds inside using profape and vulgar language, or allowing them to stand on the pavement in front to the annoyance of persons passing; having fights, quarrels and disturbances; allowing liquor barrels and kegs to remain on the pavement obstructing the footway and offending people with the fumes of liquor; keeping open late at night, with crowds inside and out.

TO THE GREAT ANNOYANCE of the neighborhood and persons passing along the pavement; carrying on a bucket trade by men, women and children, indicating a bad place, and having a most demoralizing effect: selling largely in bottles-pints and quarts-resulting in much drunkenness among boys and men.

Selling liquors, when a license has been obtained, is a legitimate business. But, like every legitimate business, it should be conducted in a legitimate and decent manner. Whenever it is conducted in an indecent manner it becomes a public nuisance. Some licenses have been refused for houses on some of the principal streets of the two cities, which are superior in streets of the two cities, which are superior in their accommodations to houses granted incenses on other streets. Such streets as Smithfield, Sixth street, Fifth avenue, Second avenue, Liberty and Penn avenue, Carson street on the Southside, Federal street and Ohio street in Allegheny, and others, are great thoroughfares, and had too many drinking places on them. They are a great annoyance to the public on those streets and depreciate the value of property.

In some wards of the cities and some town. In some wards of the cities and some townships all applications have been refused. In some of these there was no need whatever for a licensed house. In others, where licenses were had last year, the houses were great drinking places for workingmen and others in the neighborhood, crowded at nights, especially on Saturday nights, selling extensively in bottles and buckets, breeding disturbances, leading to much drunkenness and trouble, and causing sorrow and misery in the families of workingmen by enticing them from their homes and getting most of their wages for drinks. In addition to these evils, nearly all had been flagrant violators of the law. In these localities the utter demoralization on the subject seemed to require the refusal of any license.

DISTILLERS AND BREWERS. The Department of Public Safety complained that distillers and brewers and wholesale dealers were habitually supplying liquors to un-licensed houses, and that while this continued it was impossible to suppress the illegal traffic. some of the distillers and most of the brewers and wholesale dealers, when closely pressed, had to admit that they had done so. Generally they were willing to confess the wrong and promise not to be guilty in the future.

These were granted licenses on that condi-tion. But some claimed the right to sell to any persons who would pay, without inquiring or persons who would pay, white a inquiring of caring whether or not they were engaged in the illegal traffic. Of course, such were refused. One who sells to another to carry on an illegal business becomes a party to the unlawful act and is just as guilty as the direct violator of the law.

and is just as guilty as the direct violator of the law.

Another serious complaint against distillers, brewers and wholesale dealers was that they were selling enormous quantities in jugs and small kers and bottles, and delivering them late at night, and at improper and suspicious places. The jug trade is a new business. It started up after the License Court of last year. It was one of the greatest sources of drunkenness and trouble last year. Parties would get jugs or small kegs at the brewery, and, taking them to a shanty, back yard or vacant lot, have a drunken frolic all night; and frequently this occurred with the boys. That this kind of business shall casse is also made a condition in the licenses now granted. If it continue, or the practice of selling to unlicensed houses, the licenses will be revoked.

WHOLESALE DRUGGISTS. Retail druggists are not entitled to a license to sell fiquors by wholesale. It is a totally dis-tinct business. Nor are wholesale druggists, where the intention is to enter largely into the liquor business. But it may be a convenience to wholesale druggists to have a wholesale liquor license when filling orders for retail drugstores in the country, or to furnish a quart or gallon of liquor occasionally for proper puroses in the city. But it should be merely inedental to their other business, and the amount sold be a small fraction of their total sales When the liquor traffic, especially in bottles and jugs, becomes a main feature of their business they should be refused license. On that principle the Court has acted.

that principle the Court has acted.

The retail dealer may sell not more than one quart, the wholesale dealer not less than one quart. This is the dividing line between the classes of business. But the law means that the two shall be entirely different kinds of business. The main business of the retailer is drinks; the main business of the wholesaler, in large quantities, in bulk. When the retailer deals out extensively in bottles pints or quarts, he is perverting his legitimate business. When the wholesaler deals out extensively in single bottles he is perverting his legitimate business. The most fruitful source of drunkenness, and the greatest evil to boys and young men under age is the bottle trade.

the greatest evil to boys and young men under age is the bottle trade.

The examination of the applicants showed that many of the parties having a wholesale license did little more than a retail business in bottles. That and the jug trade constituted their business. Such a house is a greater evil than a retail house. It sells almost exclusively to the neighborhood. One man or boy buys a bottle or jug, and half a dozen or dozen got drunk on it. In harmony with the spirit of our present laws on the subject, the Court has felt constrained to refuse many of these wholesale constrained to refuse many of these wholes applicants who had license last year

THE DRINKING CLUBS.

Another fact was developed during the examinations-that in the past year many drinking clubs were started in different parts of the cities and larger boroughs. These are most disgraceful and demoralizing associations. The members themselves seemed to have thought so, for they were generally disguised under the so, for they were generally disguised under the name of a "Literary" or "Musical Society." This, however, is only a temporary evil, perhaps engendered by a spiteful hostility to the stringent act of 1887. These glubs will soon die out. The bad effects are afready seen and feit: the members will soon get ashamed of them and abandon them. The existence of such clubs is no argument in favor of more licensed houses, for the members could all get enough drinks without them. It is rather an argument in favor of more stringent regulations, and for drawing a tighter rein on those wholesale dealers who furnish them the liquors.

wholesale dealers who furnish them the liquors.

The bucket trade is a disgraceful business and also agreat evil. It is not unlawful to sell a quart of beer or whisky in a bucket; but when men, women and children are seen with buckets entering, and coming from, a saloon or liquor store, and carrying them along the streets to their homes, the sight is offensive and revolting to most persons, and is regarded as a sure sigh that the persons are of a low class, and the saloon or store one of the lowest and worst. There is an indecency about it which should not be tolerated. Some one has said the noor man ought to have the privilege of carrying his liquor in a bucket, for he cannot, like a rich man, have it sent in a demi-john by the express wagon to his house. But every man should have a decent respect to public opinion. Stopping the indecent bucket trade will not prevent any poor man from getting what liquor he wants.

ting what liquor he wants. BOTTLERS, AND NEW CONDITIONS. Bottling is a distinct business under the law A wholesale dealer has no right under a wholesale license to convert his house into a bottling establishment. Some who had wholesale liense last year did so, and are refused this year. Small bottling houses are generally an evil in the locality. It is difficult to conduct the business in a legitimate manner. Selling single bottles at the house or peddling them about the streets and selling to anybody who calls is apt to run into an illegitimate business—selling to improper persons.

Nearly all the parties who had license last year, including distillers, but more especially browers and wholesale dealers, violated the laws to such an extent that the Court would be justified in refusing them license this year. They get licenses now only on promises made in court that they would faithfully keep the law hereafter and shandon the evil practices of the past year. All the licenses granted this year are on these promises and conditions, and without them the licenses would not have been The Court has therefore made the licens

The Court has therefore made the licenses conditional, and for a violation of the conditions the license will be revoked. The conditions are, in retail licenses, that the licensee shall confine himself to a strictly retail business, keep all the laws on the subject, not sell in buckets or pitchers, and not make a business of bottling and selling in bottles.

In the cases of distillers, brewers, wholesale dealers and bottlers, that they shall faithfully keep the laws, not sell or furnish liquors to houses refused licenses or suspected of selling illegally, or to drinking clubs, and to abandon the jug trade. Also, that they shall confine themselves to their strictly legitimate business, and especially that wholesalers shall not make a business of bottling and selling in bottles.

Major Hancock May Start the Works To-Day With Colored Men.

STRIKERS REFUSE TO TAKE THEIR PAY

The situation at the Duquesne Steel Works remains unchanged. The report that the strikers had made threats of viclence against any who would attempt to fill their places is denied by them. To-day notices were posted up at the works for all the dissatisfied employes to go to the office at 4:30 o'clock and receive what wages was due them. Impressed with the idea that the firm was trying to work a new dodge on them they refused to go, preferring to wait, as one of their number said, until a settlement was reached.

Robert I. Rhodes, corner of Ohio and West Diamond. Steel Works, will have charge of the situation after to-morrow. The Park brothers, who control the Black Diamond, are said to be the largest stockholders in the Duquesne plant. All is quiet about the mill to-night, which is contrary to the rumors that were rife that the strikers were loitering about the mill for the purpose of intimidating anybody that they might suspect of going to work. There is nothing whatever being done at the mill, al-though it is said that Major Hancock will though it is said that Major Hancock will make an attempt to start the plant to-morrow with colored men whom he provoses bringing out from the city with him. The men, however, take no stock in the reports that the firm will try to resume with new men.

The strikers are becoming thoroughly organized, although they are holding no meetings. As they declare they will not go back to work at the old wages, and the firm appear determined in their efforts to start the mill, it is altogether probable that some interesting declared the start of the start Granted.

In the Cloak Room large sizes in Wraps, in black Camel's Hair and Silk, trimmed in lace and jet-many of them, too, at easy prices, Jackets, still more to-day and the latest novelties of the season in Cloth Newmarkets and Peasant Cloaks-an oft told tale, perhaps, and yet unless you see this Cloak Room stock you couldn't dream of "such completeness and variety.

New Directoire Suits, $15-also new Cloth Suits at $10-in spite of the low prices, these are well-made suits, plain perhaps, but nest and serviceable-no trouble to show the more elaborate ones, $25 to $125, many being imported.

If anything, too many Jerseys to choose from here; Blouse Waist stock the same state of things, so you won't be bothered with any lack of variety, in choosing.

Black Surah Silks-$1, $1 35, $1 50-the top sawyers among Surahs for finish and fineness-75c, the popular price and silk (it's 26 inches wide at that)-then the 50-cent quality, for this price is hard to equal.

Shouldn't wonder if we sold more India Silks within the next 30 days than in any previous season; the prices are very taking, and the goods also; the $1 to $1 50 grades seem to please most. The small price lots, 30 and 43 cents,

All the latest Spring Shades in the new Armure Royale Weave Silks at $1 a yard, extra value; then the fancy color stripe Surahs, an
